COAB,

Yesterday I had an appointment with one of my care providers. We had a very serious discussion about my health both physically [REDACTED] which I am in no way ashamed of and I feel comfortable discussing it with you all. My personal and professional life have become too much for me to handle and in respect for my children and my relationships, I had to take a serious look at my life and figure out what is best for my health moving forward. I have not even considered myself as a priority over the last year and as such I am in a very unstable place in my housing situation and in regards to taking care of myself. For these reasons I have to step down from my position as an alternate for the COAB.

I was very excited to see what we could do in our community and I have a very heavy heart writing this email. I wish you all the best moving forward and hope that the COAB can make some real changes when it comes to the way the police treat people in the city of Portland. Thank you to those of you who have continued to look out for me and check in on me.

Respectfully,
Joshua Robinson
